The ABC Reads program brings American Baptists together through the power of shared reading of books. Sponsored by the American Baptist Home Mission Societies, ABC Reads traditionally highlights a Judson Press book appropriate for reading and discussion in small-group settings. Because Judson Press will celebrate its 200th Anniversary in 2024, we offer two selections for this momentous year in the life of Baptist publication.

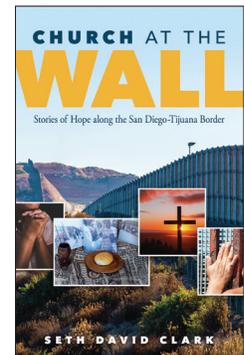

24/7 Embodying Christ-like Leadership by Leslie Copeland asks Christians who lead in any context to reflect deeply on how they embody Christ-like leadership daily. This book encourages us to examine and make real our aspirations to do as Christ would do. Copeland encourages us to set aside time to truthfully explore our own lives, and plan for maturing as servant-leaders for Christ. She reminds leaders that such characteristics as courage, commitment, and compassion are essential. Through Scripture, illustrations, and storytelling, she invites us to examine realities that beg the question of solid Christian leadership traits. As you read, you may ask if you are being, feeling, thinking, and doing the best for God and yourself? And if not, how might things be different? Read this practical work by Leslie Copeland and share her book of leadership traits with co-laborers in the Lord's fields of ministry.

The Church at the Wall: Stories of Hope along the San Diego-Tijuana Border

by Seth David Clark tells the powerful story of how the Border Church, founded and pastored by John Fanestil, worships on the San Diego-Tijuana border without a building. Every Sunday afternoon, the author, who serves as the US-side pastoral coordinator of the church, gathers with people of goodwill from both sides of the border at Friendship Park to build the kingdom of God. Their love of Christ is exhibited through celebrating communion, singing, and using their pinkies to pass the peace through the mesh metal walls between the US and Mexico. Readers will get to know this remarkable international church community—and its distinctive expressions of theology, justice, righteousness, and love—through the eyes of active participants.

Welcome!

“Change is the only constant,” we have heard it said. No wonder, then, that a full year since the release of the 2022 Discipleship and Christian Education Guide we are still talking about change in congregational ministries of faith formation and discipleship. We must keep talking about it because the changes keep coming—and COVID-era ministry teaches us that more change is needed if the church is going to maintain a place of redeeming relevance in the world.

Not all change is easy, but without it we know that life does not continue. Jesus himself told us, “Unless a grain of wheat falls into the earth and dies, it remains just a single grain; but if it dies, it bears much fruit” (John 12:24). Not that I am sanguine about that reality. Far from it! We have all suffered losses in recent months and years—of loved ones, of beloved traditions, of cherished institutions and of long-awaited milestones.

Of course, much of what we have lost is connected to changes that are inevitably part of life—rites of passage at every stage of living. The challenge has been finding ways to mark those celebrations and sorrows without the traditional rituals of our cultures and communities.

The changes we are experiencing in the church are analogous. The trends about who is returning to church, how they are returning and if they are returning at all—these were all underway pre-COVID-19. Pandemic accelerates them—and discloses the weaknesses, and the strengths, of our congregations and communities to respond to such changes.

In her Welcome to the 2022 Discipleship and Christian Education Guide, my colleague Rev. Cassandra Carkuff Williams, EdD, reminded us, “While the Christian church rests on ancient tradition, which we might be inclined to preserve by insulating ourselves from change, the ability to be untraditional is essential to that very tradition. Adaptability makes possible preservation of the tradition for each new age and context.” Adaptability, creativity, experimentation, innovation—these allow us to respond to the gospel’s call in ways that welcome new life and new voices into new spaces, physical and virtual.

In the months since writing that Welcome, Casey herself retired after seventeen years of ministry with American Baptist Home Mission Societies—an exciting change for her that bequeathed to me this traditional church resource. Her transition ripples into other changes that you will see reflected in these pages. For example, we still provide access to our classic Workshops on Church Life and Leadership, but we highly recommend new learning experiences through the ABHMS Center for Continuous Learning (CCL)—a ministry innovation that came into its own in 2022. The CCL provides a new platform for delivering the practical mission education you expect from ABHMS in faith formation, leadership development and missionary training.

Much has not changed, however! The 2023 Discipleship and Christian Education Guide begins with discussion of the theme (pages 4–9), followed by the Revised Common Lectionary readings, Year-at-a-Glance Calendar and monthly planning pages with Judson Press book highlights (pages 14–19). The resources section (pages 22–38) describes CCL offerings and includes the Judson Christian education catalog. You’ll also find a litany (pages 39–40) for worship in English, Traditional Chinese, French and Spanish!

We continue to pray that these ABHMS offerings will help your congregation become more responsive and innovative in ministries of faith formation and discipleship. As always, we welcome feedback! The Theme | Being the Church

By now you have surely heard the news. Media headlines, research studies and titles of books and articles declare that the Christian church in North America is not what it once was.

Some church leaders face this reality and mourn deeply. Many of us came of age there; we embraced our call to gospel ministry there; we created family there; we have served God long and well there. We love that church. It has been our home, our village, our life support in times of celebration and sorrow. We lament and even rage against what feels like an attack on our way of life, on our legacy and on the God and institution we love.

Other church leaders hold their grief more lightly, more hopefully. Yes, there are losses, but didn't Jesus say that a grain of wheat has to fall and die before it can bear fruit? Aren't we a resurrection people who see potential for new life even in places of death? Isn't it possible, we ask, that the dark and dank tomb may become for God's people a dark and fruitful womb?

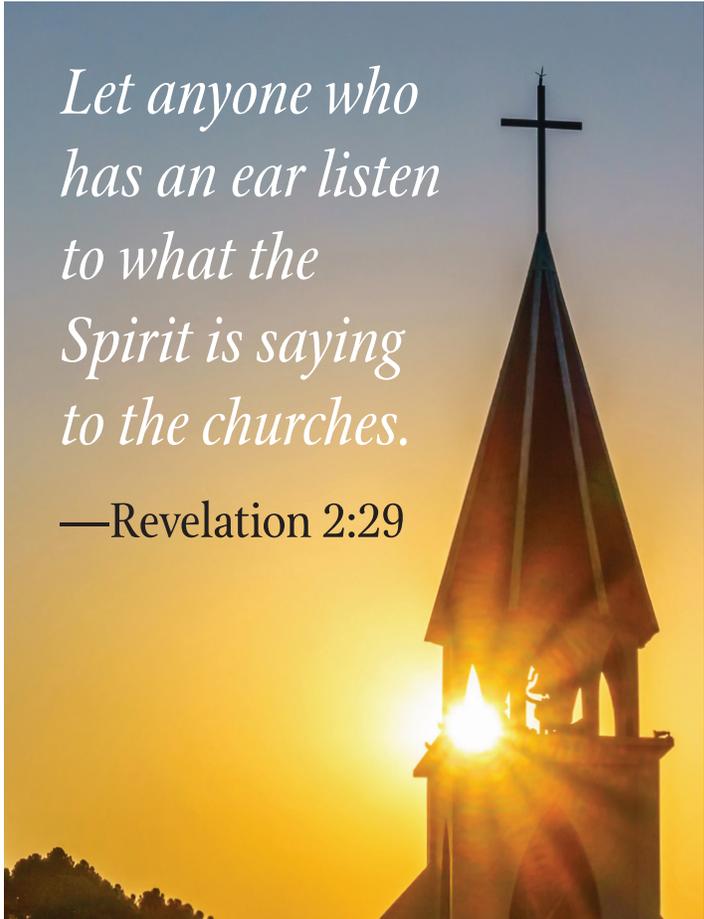

But let's face it: even for those of us who call ourselves a resurrection people, it is not always easy to recognize or welcome new life when the past we loved seems to be dying. This year, in this Discipleship and Christian Education Guide, we take seriously the challenges presented by declines in church attendance (Dones), the rise of religious disaffiliation (Nones) and the changes in how people experience and express their spiritual identities and seek community.

What is the Spirit saying about how we can be the church in this day and age?

In his article about "Being a Baptist Church Today" (pp. 4–5), Rev. Jeffrey A. Johnson, PhD, reminds us that Jesus followers are called out into the world, not into a building, and considers anew the gifts of Baptist identity today. Rev. Dr. Rachael Lawrence reflects on "Being the Church in Transition" (pp. 6–7), particularly in a COVID era of rapid change and challenge. And Rev. Cheryl Price, PhD, explores the challenges and opportunities of "Being the Church in the World" (pp. 8–9), highlighting creative wisdom from Judson Press authors about embodying Christian ministry in our communities.

The challenges are also opportunities to create and innovate, to experiment and encounter, to listen and learn. What are the needs today's generations are expressing? Let us have ears to hear what ministries of faith formation, healing, and transformation the Spirit is calling us out to do.

Being a Baptist Church Today by Jeffrey A. Johnson

The church is not the building. This is one lesson the novel coronavirus pandemic has taught tens of thousands, if not hundreds of thousands of Christian congregations. The church of Jesus Christ does not need a building to survive, let alone thrive. Baptists in North America have known this truth for centuries, although sadly we have forgotten or neglected this awareness. COVID-era ministry has revived its importance in our daily lives.

Baptist faith is among the oldest expressions of Christianity in North America, having begun in 1638, nearly 150 years before the Declaration of Independence was signed. It would have been unthinkable in the first two centuries of our Baptist history to put the word church on the structures where Baptist communities of faith gathered. That moniker would not be used for our buildings until well into the 1800s. Before that time, Baptist believers gathered in meetinghouses, which became the sacred spaces where the church, the body of Christ, gathered to worship and then scattered to serve. It was in meetinghouses where Baptist believers met collectively to take care of business with God and take care of the business of the congregation. It was where they lived out their calling as the “called-out ones” (ekklesia), being first called out of the world into a personal relationship with God through Jesus Christ and then called back into the world from which they came to be salt and light. Up and down the eastern seaboard of the United States, you still find old buildings with “Meetinghouse” chiseled into their foundation stones. In those first centuries of US Baptist history, church was used exclusively to describe the people not the property.

When Jesus said in Matthew 16:18, “I will build my church,” he was speaking of community not concrete. So then, what does it really mean to talk about being a Baptist church? To begin, it means what being any Christian church means: being a living entity, comprised of baptized believers in Jesus, who are relevant in their context and sensitive to the culture. But there are distinctive things about a Baptist church—practices that define us among myriad expressions of the Christian faith. Let’s look at a few of these distinctives.

First and foremost, Baptist churches hold to the authority of the Bible. The Scriptures are the basis for all that is distinctively Baptist. We believe they are good for doctrine (what is right), for correction (what is not right), for reproof (how to get right) and for instruction (how to stay right) (2 Timothy 3:16). Thus, the Bible is the foundation for what we believe (faith) and what we do (practice).

Baptist churches also affirm that All members are ministers, a belief known as the priesthood of all believers (1 Peter 2:9). This doesn’t mean every member is called to ordained ministry, but it affirms that every believer is called to some ministry—a vital belief borne out in pandemic. Additionally, the priesthood of believers affirms that any believer may go to God without a human intermediary; we all have direct access through the Holy Spirit.

As members of a Baptist church, we are called to be Prophetic (Isaiah 1:17). While some Christians emphasize a future-oriented sense of that word (foretelling), Baptists have been committed to the prophetic spirit that speaks in the present day (forth-telling). In the tradition of the

“Will the real founder of the Baptist faith please stand up?”

Cartoon by Danny Ellison, published in The Unofficial Baptist Handbook by Lora-Ellen McKinney (Judson Press, 2012).

Hebrew prophets, Baptists are willing to stand on the front line of many struggles for social justice, not the least of which has been the protest line, where we have sought to raise awareness about injustice, speaking truth to power and demanding change.

Being a Baptist church also means that we are Totally autonomous congregations. Every Baptist congregation is independent, whether it belongs to a national convention, state association, or other regional affiliation. Such voluntary associations may empower other bodies to influence the local church, but they may not interfere without consent from the congregation. Ultimately, each local church decides its own affairs (1 Peter 5:1-3).

Being a Baptist church also involves a respect for Individual conscience and soul liberty (Romans 14:12). The phrases individual conscience and soul liberty mean that each Baptist believer has, by the very presence of the Holy Spirit in their life, the ability to engage the Bible and understand it for themselves without an individual or institution telling them what they should or have to believe.

Soul liberty extends to religious liberty, and Baptist churches are all about Separation of church and state (Mark 12:17). Historically, this commitment was about the government staying out of the church's affairs (and not vice versa). Religious liberty insists that the government neither sponsors nor hinders the individual's right to practice any religion. As a Baptist, I may not agree with your choice, but I agree that you have a choice.

Being a Baptist church also means that we affirm Two ordinances or spiritual observances: believer's baptism (Matthew 28:19) and the Lord's Supper or Communion (1 Corinthians 11:23-26). We believe these two rites alone were instituted by Jesus, practiced by the early church, and explained in the later New Testament. They are given to us to draw us closer to Christ and to one another.

The universal church is the living, visible body of Christ in our world today—and a Baptist church is one expression of that body. As such, Baptists are committed to the Great Commission (Matthew 28:18-20), and we practice the Great Commandment (Matthew 22:36-40). Let it be said of us that “the church has left the building”—to be the hands and feet of Jesus in a world that so desperately needs God's transforming love.

Rev. Jeffrey A. Johnson, PhD, is national coordinator of faith initiation (evangelism) and discipleship with American Baptist Home Mission Societies.

Being a Church in Transition by Rachael Lawrence

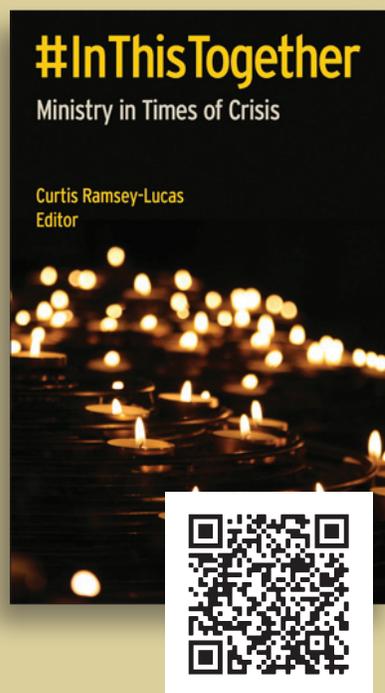

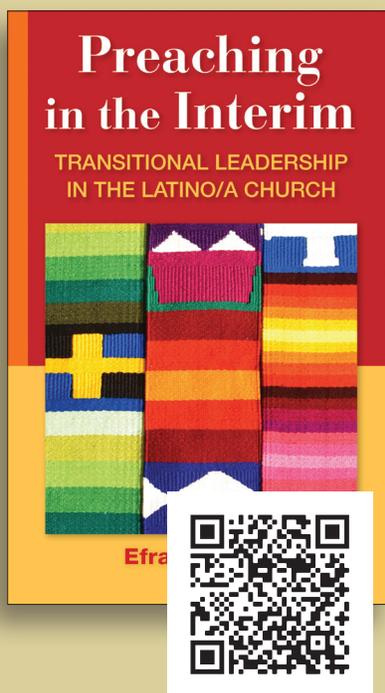

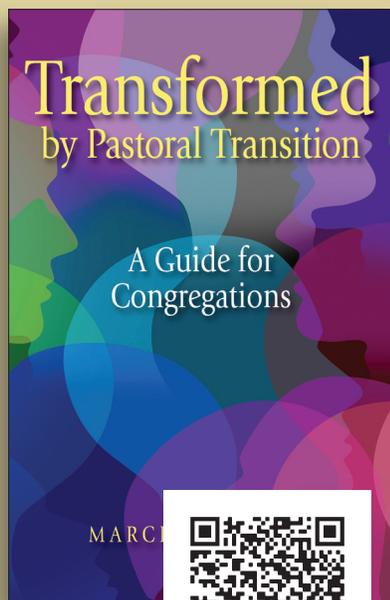

Human beings notoriously fear change. Change is stressful, fear-provoking and unavoidable in all aspects of life—including the church.

The pandemic heightened those common tensions around change. COVID-era life changed the way people work, socialize and worship. Pastors are no exception to these trends,¹ and churches have also changed—in how they worship, offer Christian education and serve in the world. We have needed to shift and adapt in many ways because the world has changed. God calls us as disciples to meet the world's needs as it is, not how it was. What wisdom can we draw about being the church in transition from other disciples?

Change as Spirit-Led

Marcia Bailey, in her book Transformed by Pastoral Transition, reminds churches to turn to God's Word in times of transition. While the Bible offers many examples of transitions, Bailey reminds us of perhaps the most powerful transition: Jesus to the disciples to the early church. She writes,

In all four Gospels, Jesus spoke to his followers about what lay ahead, yet they did not fully understand his meaning. After Jesus' resurrection, they grieved his loss for a second time, but he assured them that with the help of the Holy Spirit, the ministry would continue and they would be empowered to lead it (Acts 1:6-8). Following the story from the Gospels into the Acts of the Apostles, we see how this empowerment transformed both the disciples and the community (Acts 2:1-36). New leaders arose... and indeed the gospel continues to effect change in all who hear its liberating message. This transition story is a powerful reminder of God's faithfulness to the entire community in the midst of dramatic, ongoing change.²

From the church's very beginnings, in times of transition followers of Jesus have listened for the Holy Spirit guiding us on a new path. Change makes us dependent on such Spirit-led wisdom on the way to Spirit-led action.

Change as Future-Focused

Sometimes the Spirit reveals to us new goals as part of the transition process. As a seminary leader and interim pastor, Efrain Agosto knows this well. His book Preaching in the Interim: Transitional Leadership in the Latino/a Church, offers a sermon reflecting on Philippians 3:13-14. He asks, "If I am in the process of reaching the goal, what do I do during that process? What do I do now to get there?" He continues,

*Paul offers two answers in this context. First, he argues that we should not care too much for the past. Rather, we are to keep the past in proper perspective as we move forward toward the future. Therefore, second, he exhorts the Philippians to extend themselves toward the future. The image Paul describes is of an athlete in a race who, when nearing the finish line, extends the chest to cross the finish line first. If the runner takes even a quick look back, he or she might fall, or someone might overtake him or her. The runner's gaze needs to be on the finish line. Any deviation could mean the loss of the race. "Don't look back," Paul exhorts. The past has already happened, including, as a runner and a believer, your preparations; you did the necessary exercises to prepare for the race; you trained well. Now it's a matter of keeping your eyes on the end goal.*³

The desire to look back is strong, but it can prevent needed change for the church in transition. As disciples, let the Holy Spirit guide us; setting our vision toward the future is essential.

Change as Invitation

We know change is inevitable. Even the first disciples experienced traumatic change and transition. How do today's disciples learn to "fear not" when it comes to trusting the new thing God is doing in our lives (see Isaiah 43:19)? In #InThisTogether: Ministry in Times of Crisis, contributor Lauren Lisa Ng invites us to reframe the feeling of being "pushed" by a crisis to being "prompted or invited" by the Holy Spirit:

*If we trust that God's Spirit prompts us in times of crisis—if we believe we are never abandoned to the deep—then perhaps we can view change as an invitation rather than a forceful push. What if we are not being pushed into the deep end but are being prompted by the one who called Peter out upon the water with the simple word, "Come" (Matthew 14:29). In times of crisis we are especially attuned to the Creator's invitation to ask critical questions concerning the church's identity and purpose. The invitation has always been there, but in times of relative calm, it can be easy to ignore. In these times, we have learned innumerable lessons and gained immeasurable insights about being the church, especially when it comes to our creativity and connectivity.*⁴

Transitions offer us an opportunity and invitation to change, through casting a new vision and setting new goals. While transitions may challenge the church, especially in times of crisis, as disciples we can draw on wisdom from God's Word, the Holy Spirit's guidance, and Jesus' assurance to be with us always to move through it and thrive!

Being a Church in the World by Cheryl Price

The world is full of complex problems, issues, joys and victories. How people navigate everyday life and the world around them is part of who we are collectively and individually. Our feelings, thoughts and actions are shaped and influenced by our choices. Our choices are shaped by our environment, culture and world events. For most people in our congregations, the Christian church remains primary among those influences, and together we are the body of Christ and the ongoing expression of God's love at work in the world.

Since the people are the church, what does the church look like, and how does it function? Jesus demonstrated through his life, ministry, death and resurrection that his disciples are expected to be very much a part of God's love in action.

Whether the church is meeting in a building, virtually or in the wilderness, the ministry of Jesus must continue. In the features below, find insights from Judson Press authors who offer practical applications for being the church today and more.

Being Peculiar, Not Perfect

In A Peculiar Church: Practicing Baptist Theology, Jonathan Malone asserts that there is “no perfect Baptist church.” The church has its flaws, including bitterness, judgment and times of despair. Yet Malone proclaims the church may also be a place of grace and joy, where possibilities are present to show “the church in its glory and [not only its] shame.” Malone's book examines the definition of the church, worship theology, practice and denominational structure and values. These topics invite us to take a deeper dive into the multiple ways Baptist churches live out and think about their faith.

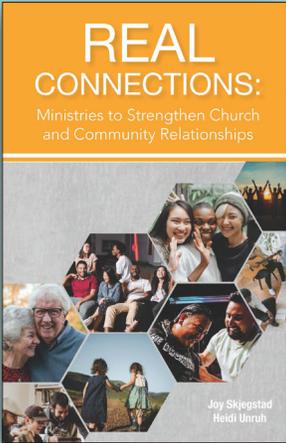

Matthew 28:20 offers a direction for God's people to move forward. After commissioning the Eleven to go into the world and make disciples, Jesus added an exhortation and a consolation, urging his followers to teach others “to obey everything that I have commanded you. And remember, I am with you always, to the end of the age” (NRSVUE). Malone asks us to take a moment to stop and reflect on how Jesus' words influence and inspire us to make a “change, adopt, or add” in the context of their own experiences of the church. What does this Scripture mean to you, individually and as a church community, especially as you engage in ministry outside the church?

Being Creative about Being Connected

In their book Real Connections: Ministries to Strengthen Church and Community Relationships, Joy Skjegstad and Heidi Unruh address concerns about how to build richer relationships in the body of Christ. As we learned during the pandemic, the church needs diverse opportunities to make connections among people—both in and beyond the church building. Persons in our congregations love God, but God's love is action-oriented and demands tangible expression. Skjegstad and Unruh encourage today's disciples to seek out new people in the church.

One creative idea they recommend is the development of affinity groups in your congregation. These groups help people to connect in person and virtually by creating small communities based on life experience, current issues, or a favorite activity. Let your church members decide and extend their own invitations. Try opening these kinds of affinity groups to your local community, creating opportunities to form relationships with neighbors—even those you might otherwise find challenging. Creating genuine connections fortifies the body of Christ beyond the walls of the church.

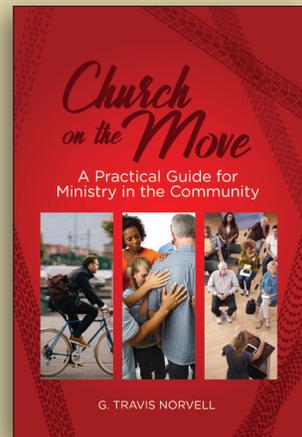

Ministries in Motion

Why have a church building? Who should have access to the church building or property? What are the governing rules for utilizing the church building and its outside properties? G. Travis Norvell answers these questions and more in his book Church on the Move: A Practical Guide for Ministry in the Community. Norvell reveals how the church, the people and the building miss out on opportunities to open to, share with and invite people to experience what the church offers. Norvell learned by regularly riding his bike through the community that the church community encompassed not just a few blocks but expanded to places and events he never realized.

Norvell encourages churches to open their spaces to community groups and other events. Sharing the good news of Christ includes making a place at the table or in an unused room during the week. If your church is in the suburbs and has outdoor space, use it to expand your involvement and invite other groups or faith communities to use the grounds. If your church is in the city, take a slow walk around the blocks surrounding your church. What needs and opportunities do you observe? Be open to new or collaborative possibilities.

Teaching Tips for Faith Formation

Ministry in the church covers many areas and needs. In this feature, Judson Press publisher Cheryl Price spotlights four books that encourage Baptist history and youth faith formation. Examine these books at www.judsonpress.com and see which ones will assist your ministries of faith formation within the Baptist tradition.

“What Does It Mean to Be Baptist?”

New and seasoned Baptists may find new energy and life in rediscovering their Baptist roots and exploring what it means to be Baptist. If you or others you know ask this question, invest in a resource guide for small-group study. Para ser bautistas / Being Baptist by J. Manny Santiago is a concise, accessible bilingual resource, written in Spanish and English. The book includes Baptist principles and practices, including Scripture, missions, the priesthood of all believers, and the ordinances of the church.

Teaching Tip: Record your lessons as videos with music, short skits or reenactment of a biblical narrative. Discuss with learners what they experienced and what insight they can apply to their lives. Invite them to create their own videos to illustrate next week’s lesson!

Vibrant Faith Formation for Young People

Intentional opportunities for faith formation with children and youth will help create a stronger identity as Jesus followers and as American Baptists. The following resources are designed especially for ministries with African American children and youth.

Pressing Forward in Faith

Why are so many young people disconnected from the church? Why are youth and young adults missing from traditional youth programs, Christian education classes and other events in the local congregation? Carmichael Crutchfield and Denise Janssen’s Pressing Forward: Faith, Culture and African American Youth (Judson, 2022) examines how identity and faith are connected to the development of African American youth. Harsh historical and social realities are part of the spiritual growth (or lack thereof) for African American young people. Where Faith and Culture Intersect

No matter the ethnic or cultural makeup of your congregation, A History of the Black Baptist Church by Wayne E. Croft Sr. delves into the struggles, challenges and triumphs of Black people in the United States, tracing that church history from the hush arbors of the invisible institution during slavery. Learn about the intersection of key leaders, social concerns and historical events, and their influence on the emergence of the Black Baptist conventions. Be encouraged by the endurance and faith of the Black church, which continues to provide hope in times of sorrow and freedom to all who accept the love of Jesus.

Teaching Tip: Have youth create short audio recordings describing how knowing Jesus helps them in their lives. Listen to the recordings in your group, and give participants the opportunity to discuss what it means to live as a godly person in the world.

Centered on Hope

Need help implementing programs of faith formation through youth ministry at your church? Invite your youth ministry leader or team member to read and implement quality practices for youth ministry. In their book Youth Ministry in the Black Church: Centered in Hope (Judson, 2013) Anne E. Streaty Wimberly, Sandra L. Barnes and Karma D. Johnson challenge the church to expand our vision and commitment to ministry with youth. We need dynamic teams of volunteers drawn from all parts of church and community life. This resource provides information to transform youth ministries, strategies to lead effectively and inspiration to encourage congregational support.

Teaching Tip: Invite youth to select a video expressing their faith (e.g., music video, movie clip, spoken word or video they create themselves). They should be prepared to discuss why they chose the video. Plan to show three of these videos and discuss them. End your time together by formulating an action for them to do that reflects their faith values.

The Polished King: Living Words of Martin Luther King Jr.

Joseph Evans

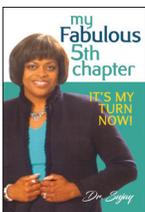

Joseph Evans analyzes how the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s preaching brought the “living word” and various rhetorical techniques together in ways that helped people understand, and be given hope by, his messages. The author observes that James Baldwin—himself a gifted writer and provocative thinker—considered King to be an “ideal preacher.” This book weaves Baldwin’s poetic and fiery words, passion for justice, and admiration of King’s oration into a detailed, thought-provoking examination of the rhythm of determination and transformative power in King’s speaking, writing, and faith. Their love of Christ is exhibited through celebrating communion, singing, and using their pinkies to pass the peace through the mesh metal walls between the U.S. and Mexico. Sympathy, Solidarity, and Silence: Three European Baptist Responses to the Holocaust

Lee B. Spitzer

Drawing from historical documents from the Baptist World Alliance, newspaper articles from the Baptist Times and others, and the works of contemporary and historic German theologians, Spitzer weaves a narrative that engages hope and deeply disturbs. How did Baptist theology inspire some to save lives, while the Church was used as a tool to promote the most unthinkable of human behaviors in neighboring countries? How did the Baptist World Alliance respond to this deep conflict? Would the Baptist principles of freedom prevail? The History of the Karen People of Burma

Anglene Naw with Jerry Cain as editor

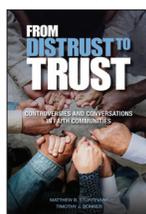

Anglene Naw along with Jerry Cain detail the Karen ethnic minority's many-centuries-long struggle with the Burmese majority in Burma/Myanmar. Told from a Christian Karen perspective, this book shares the history of Christian missionary work that predates Adoniram Judson. Additionally, Naw shares how the missionaries helped the Karen codify a written language, opening educational opportunities for a culture eager to learn; how religious differences have fueled open warfare for generations, and more. Stories of heroism and bravery amid suffering and oppression abound. Because the study of ethnic minorities is illegal in Burma, this book provides a unique perspective of someone who has not only studied but lived the experience. ISBN: 978-0-8170-1838-2

A Peculiar Church: Practicing Baptist Theology

Jonathan A. Malone

This book is divided into three parts: first, the challenges and methodology associated with creating a Baptist Theology; second, worship and ordinances; and third, other aspects of church life and ministry such as baptism and funerals. A pivotal point in Malone's "doing theology" is rooted in convictions, which he describes as "centrally held statements out of which a theology emerges." Read this book to learn more about how Baptist theology is reflective of the responses of God's people to God's Word. ISBN: 978-0-8170-1831-3

Litany of Presence

One: The Scripture speaks your Word to us: “The thought of my affliction and my homelessness is wormwood and gall! My soul continually thinks of it and is bowed down within me. But this I call to mind, and therefore I have hope: The steadfast love of the LORD never ceases, [your] mercies never come to an end; they are new every morning; great is your faithfulness. ‘The LORD is my portion,’ says my soul, ‘therefore I will hope in him.’”
(Lamentations 3:19-24)

Many: The steadfast love of the Lord never ceases.

One: In times of danger and uncertainty, we find safety and welcome in your presence.

Many: Therefore, we will hope in you.

One: In times of helplessness, we find freedom to choose in your presence.

Many: The steadfast love of the Lord never ceases.

One: In times of isolation and alienation, we find strength for our work together in your presence.

Many: Therefore, we will hope in you.

One: In times of suspicion and distrust, we find wisdom for renewed relationship in your presence.

Many: The steadfast love of the Lord never ceases.

One: In times of weary spirits and worn bodies, we are empowered to persevere in your presence.

Many: Therefore, we will hope in you.

One: In times of loneliness and solitude, we find communion with one another in your presence.

Many: The steadfast love of the Lord never ceases.

All: Great is your faithfulness, O God. Therefore, we will hope in you.

Letanía de presencia

Líder: La Escritura nos habla tu Palabra: “Recuerda que ando errante y afligido, que estoy saturado de hiel y amargura. Siempre tengo esto presente, y por eso me deprimó. Pero algo más me viene a la memoria, lo cual me llena de esperanza: El gran amor del Señor nunca se acaba, y su compasión jamás se agota. Cada mañana se renuevan sus bondades; ¡muy grande es su fidelidad! Por tanto, digo: “El Señor es todo lo que tengo. ¡En él esperaré!”

Leader: L'Écriture nous parle de ta Parole: Oh ! souviens-toi de mon humiliation et de ma vie errante, du poison, de l'absinthe dont je suis abreuvé ! Sans cesse, je m'en souviens, et j'en suis abattu. Mais voici la pensée que je me rappelle à moi-même, la raison pour laquelle j'aurai de l'espérance: non, les bontés de l'Éternel ne sont pas à leur terme et ses tendresses ne sont pas épuisées. Chaque matin, elles se renouvellent. Oui, ta fidélité est grande ! J'ai dit: L'Éternel est mon bien, c'est pourquoi je compte sur lui.
